

Persona differences do not leave the same-persona sampling floor

Each grey dot is one pair of repeated draws from the SAME persona, so it contains no demographic difference by construction. Both between-cell values fall inside that range; the within-cell value (4/15) is larger than either. Plotting the floor as a single bar at its mean would make v2 appear to exceed it, which the tail probabilities show it does not.